In my view, the following are needed in addition to the above, to develop an applied science as art, in a system such as WeSH, along with its ideals in print (the mission, values list, and vision statements, selections in the consumer guide), that then make it dimension psychiatry ideal plus.

1. The document “A Multifaceted Space: Aspects To Treatment In Social Work And Psychology” -- its points, resources, praxis, and intra-extensions. Also, The 20+ Points Of What Is Called Mental And Social Wellbeing And Behavioral Science: An Outline Of The Actual Domain In MVO-P Terms – the multivariate ways to view the totality patient-client that one actually has, before one, and is relevant in approach. And so forth.

2. Architecture of mind (including epistemological factors and biocomputational architecture and its contents; see several of my documents on the topic).

3. Consideration of karmic action thru to result.

4. Transformation (of individual, situation, societal factors, world-space, etc)

A to B or D to C or A to C to B to C to D.

This results in a connected, dimension, total-picture view, science, art, and praxis. Where the ideals have their intended, realistic application. The various roles here at WeSH apply.
